MEMORANDOM FOR: Chedimen,

Carear Sorvice Board

FROM

: Chrisman, CIA Coreer Sorvice Board

SUBJECT

: Curear Service Lattor No. 1

It has come to my attention that the Carsor Service Boards desire guidance on cortain matters under their cognizence. This is in the nature of such guidance. If this missive proves of interest and value, it will be followed by others.

- l. It should be recognized that Curser Service Boards are advisory to the Exceptive in charge of the office. Their mission is stated in Regulation Their job is to assist each office in developing its part of the CIA carser service. The Agency Personnel regulations lay down the policy on most matters, and each Carsor Service Beard member should be thoroughly femiliar with these regulations. But Carsor Service Eocres go further that the cold printed word of regulations. They are the embodiness of the Agency's desire to encourage all employees to make their work with this organization a career; the Agency's recognition that skilled personnel are CIA's most valuable asset; the assurance to all employees that their future is under the watchful and understanding eye of associates the are directly interested in and concerned by their accomplishments.
- 2. It should be understood that everybody in the Agency is not a career employee, although everybody has an equal opportunity to become onc. A certain percentage of employees are probationary-some of these will not qualify for coreer service, and others will lose their interest. Another group of caployees are here by agreement or preference only for Limited parieds. Only those who are qualified and dedicated to a cureer sorvice will be so considered.
- 3. There appears to be some confusion about promotion policy. While it is inadvisable to lay down arbitrary rules about the time in grade required for promotions, it is, nevertheless, only practical that a fairly uniform practice be followed by the different offices. It is, therefore, suggested that the following rule of thumb be used-up through as-9, at least six months in grade; from CS-9 through CS-15, a year or more in grade.

MII the most important factor that should be understood by all Carcor Service Bourds and stressed by them to all supervisors is that premotions are based on denoratrated ability to parform work of a higher grade, and are not given simply for serving in grade a certain period of time. Further, there should be complete fromkness with all employees on the subject of their capabilities and chances of advancement—that is that FER (the Personnel Evaluation Report) is for—use it.

In fact, we may soon reach the stage, particularly in higher grades, where premotions will be on a competitive basis.

- b. Career planning is one of the most vital aspects of Career Service Board work. We should strive toward the goal of mapping out for each individual a career program extending several years in advance, recognizing, of course, that demands of the Agency or failure of the individual to measure up might alter the program. Employees should be given all possible apportunities to broaden the base of their careers by gaining experience in different offices of the Agency. If, for example, an ONE careerist desires experience in FI, is qualified and can be utilized, he should get that town of duty, retaining his career designation of ONE but being judged by the FI supervisor on his performance while doing FI work. Also, changes in career designation should be granted where the individual desires and the graning board concurs.
- 5. Training will play an increasingly vital role in the development of our career service. Career Service Beards when considering reassignments and promotions should give careful evaluation to the training the individual has received. This not only includes the courses offered by the Office of Training, but also the opportunites offered Agency personnel to attend the National Her College, Armed Forces Staff College, and the Army, Navy and Air Her College. These service courses, which are open only to the most highly qualified individuals, are important to those Agency personnel the are to serve under or be closely associated with military commands.
- 6. The Career Service Brards should give adequate attention to developing the possibilities for roman making a career with the Agency, and to insure that the staps up the professional ladder are always open to qualified and able rowse.
- 7. Finally, it is the desire of the CIA Corsor Sorvice Board to reduce to the absolute minimum the volume of paper work sent to the other Career Service Boards. It is recognized that during these corly stages a certain amount of the development of our program must be on a trial and error busis. However, it is heped that soon the principles mill be well ostablished, and the bounds will have all of the necessary material with which to work. He hope that by September we can present a paper to all amployees on the subject what Cureer Service in the Control Intelligence Agancy Means to You. He would be pleased to have X1A members of any Career Service Board attend as observers the regularly scheduled meetings of this Ecard.
